COUNTY CONVENTION WOMAN' CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION

The thirteenth annual meeting of the United Counties of Prince Edward, Hastings, and Lennox and Addington was held at Enterprise, in the Methodist church, on May 30th and 31st.

The morning session opened at 9.30 o'clock, the President, Mrs. Stephen Gibson, in the chair.

The devotional exercises were taken by Mrs. Miller, Napanee; singing "All Hail The Power of Jesus Name," and the reading of the crusade, Psalm No. 146; and prayer by Mrs. Graham, Trenton, and Mrs. Pringle, Selby.

In the absence of Miss Farley, Belleville, the Recording Secretary, Mrs. Arnold Way, Trenton, was appointed secretary pro tem.

In appointing the dimerent committees a discussion was led by Mrs. Miller on plan of work for the year.

The Secretary and Treasurer's reports showed the number of local unions 30, regular meetings 504, regular meetings 90, public meetings 29, members Loyal Temperance Legion 1's 2, total amount raised during year $2335.29, number of Unions observing Crusade day 4, number observing week of prayer 6, total number of Unions 30.

Reports of Superintendents of Departments followed.

The departments number twenty, and were well represented, each superintendent reporting work done and much prayers over last year, and much satisfaction over the work done, each superintendent thinking the department by them represented the most important of any.

The session closed with prayer by Mrs. Dickinson.

TUESDAY, 2 p.m.

Devotional exercises led by Mrs. Crowe, Trenton, Hymn 349, Bible reading, Eph. 6 chapter, 10 to 18 verse.

Mrs. Crowe thought this, the Evangelistic Department, the most important of the work. We might just as well try to run an engine without steam, as try to breathe without air, as to try to do God's work without prayer.

A short talk on Liberty League propaganda by Mrs. Rockwell, of Napanee, showing some of the methods used by them in order to discredit prohibition.

A delightful solo was rendered by Mrs. Hunter, Belleville.

Mrs. M. Denyes, Provincial Superintendent of Scientific Temperance, was then called to the platform. Mrs. Denyes believes that the training of the child is first of importance, that the kindergarten is as important as the university, hence the need of scientific temperance being taught in the public schools.

Tuesday evening opening exercises were conducted by Rev. M. W. Leigh of Enterprise.

Hymn 116, Canadian Hymnal; scripture lesson, Matt. 13th chapter; hymn "Onward Christian Soldiers."

Chairman's address, Mr. Leigh said it afforded him great pleasure to preside over a meeting of such importance as a W.C.T.U. Convention. He spoke on behalf of the trustees of the church, the members and the ladies, in welcoming the W.C.T.U. to Enterprise.

Mrs. M. Denyes again addressed the convention. In her calm, serious, convincing manner, she again emphasized the rights of the child to a healthy, happy, joyous childhood. Also the poisonous effects of alcohol, standing in the same class with opium, morphine, arsnic, strychinee, and other drugs of like nature. An expert in mental diseases has stated that alcohol is the greatest menace of the present day. Dr. Charles Mayo says alcohol is seldom prescribed by the leading physicians of the present day.

Rev. Shorey, of Trinity church, Napanee, spoke of the many changes since the days of his boyhood, spent near the village of Enterprise, when four or five hotels was the usual thing for every village, and the drunken man with horse and rig was given the right of way. The village had not come all at once, but had been the fruits of the noble men and women who did not fear being unpopular, in order to stamp out this great evil. Dr. Shorey also voiced the need of instruction along the line of scientific instruction and the training of the child.

Music was furnished by the choir of the Methodist church, and also by Mrs. Hunter, of Belleville, who gave several fine solos during the convention.

Wednesday morning the meeting again opened with devotional exercises, led by Mrs. Conison, of Deseronto.

The convention then proceeded with the business of electing the officers for the coming year.

The officers elected are as follows:

President—Mrs. Stephen Gibson, Belleville.

1st Vice-President—Mrs. N. B. Miller, Napanee.

2nd Vice-President—Mrs. Graham, Trenton.

Recording Secretary—Miss Farley, Belleville.

Corresponding Secretary—Mrs. O. Rockwell, Napanee.

Treasurer—Miss Reeves, Belleville.

Mrs. Benj. Denison, Selby—L. Y. L. Secretary.

The Superintendents of Departments. Evangelistic — Mrs. Crowe, Trenton.

Anti-narcotic—Mrs. W. B. Curry, Trenton.

Flowers, Fruit and Delicacy—Mrs. H. Bell, Belleville.

Parlor Meetings—Mrs. Hudgins, Selby.

Natural Education—Mrs. T. A. Dunwoodie, Newburgh.

Law Enforcement—Mrs. Henry Armitage, Napanee.

Press—Mrs. Archie Miniker, Picton.

Scientific Temperance—Miss L. Anderson, Napanee.

Temperance in Sunday Schools—Mrs. S. D. Lockwood, Enterprise.

Medal Contest—Mrs. J. L. Wilson, Enterprise.

Exhibition and Fairs — Mrs. Pringle, Selby.

Travellers' Aid—Mrs. Merney Parks, Napanee.

Missionary and Lumber Camps —Mrs. Sexsmith, Wilton.

Canadianization—Mrs. George Cole, W. Bridge St., Belleville.

A paper by Mrs. Benj. Denison argued the necessity of scientific teaching in every community. Mrs. Benison made some very strong points in favor of her arguments.

The different departments were taken up and discussed.

RESOLUTIONS

We, the members of Prince Edward, Hastings, and Lennox and Addington Woman's Christian Temperance Union, in session in the Methodist Church, at Enterprise, resolve that we tender to the Provincial Woman's Temperance Union the following resolutions:

1. That scientific temperance instruction be discussed and given in a prominent place wherever practicable, especially in every local Union.

2. That suitable prizes be presented to P. S. and H. S. pupils for best essays on "Why The Pupil Should Fight the Cigarette."

3. Resolved that we stand opposed to dance halls, under the present condition, and would urge that proper chaperons be appointed, and said halls closed before midnight.

COURTESY COMMITTEE

We desire first to acknowledge God's goodness to us during the past year, and His continual presence with us in our convention.

We tender our heartfelt thanks to the Enterprise Union who has so cordially ministered to our comfort, and to our hostesses who so kindly received us into their homes.

To the Trustee Board of the church in which we met, to the Rev. Chairman, Mr. Leigh, who so ably presided, to the choir, and soloist, Mrs. Hunter, and other singers; to all that brought greetings and words of wishes to our convention, and to Mrs. Denyes, of Wilton, and Dr. Shorey, of Napanee, for much beneficial information and entertaining addresses.

Signed

MRS. L. R. BROWN,
Courtesy Committee.

Wednesday evening's service was one of great benefit to all. A most interesting talk by our beloved President, Mrs. Gibson, on "Crosses, how they benefit us spiritually, if rightfully interpreted by us."

The meeting closed by prayer and singing, "God be with you till we Meet Again."

FEEDING THE HUNGRY NO SACRIFICE

If the people of the North American continent were to cut appreciably into their expenditure on unnecessaries, as they did during the war, there would be no Russian famine problem. The United States revenue officials announce that fifty billion cigarettes were consumed in that country last year, or an average for every man of five a day.

The figures for Canada are not available, but in a comparative sense they probably are not much less. Hundreds of millions are blown away in smoke every year. Of course not all this money can be said to be utterly wasted, the figures being cited only for the purpose of showing if an effort were made, how much money could be saved.

It would not take a very great deal of economizing on the part of the people of Canada to raise enough money to feed all the hungry Russian children that the Grand Duke the Children Fund is likely to be responsibility for. Some people may really skimp themselves in making a contribution by far the greater part give only out of their abundance. Many have not even done that.

Send your contributions without delay to Sir George Burn, the treasurer of the Canadian Committee for the Children Fund, or forward it through your local organization or bank.

CHAUTAUQUA, A GROWING INTERNATIONAL MOVEMENT

Has it ever occurred to you that Chautauqua is really much broader and vastly more important than just what you see and hear each summer under the big tent? Chautauqua is not local. Our local assembly is merely our personal participation in a great international movement. It is the free forum and common meeting ground of all denominations and classes of people—an open parliament where leaders of thought may be developed and may be heard.

During the past few years Chautauqua has become permanently established throughout Canada, Australia, and New Zealand. A beginning has been made in England. In the United States it has long held a popular place in the education of the people. With an interchange of speakers between these countries, year after year, the bonds of friendship cannot help but be strengthened.

Napanee dates July 3rd to 8th.

DENBIGH

Judge H. A. Lavell, of Kingston, presided at the Dundas Court held here on the 26th ult. There were only two cases of minor interest to be tried, which were disposed of with his usual despatch.

The Court of Revision of the Assessment Roll for Denbigh, Abinger and Ashby was held on the 27th, and Sir Hugh Graham, municipal Council on the 29th ult., for transaction of general municipal business was transacted.

Dr. R. E. Sparks, of Kingston, made his usual spring business trip to Denbigh last week.

Mrs. Alex. Cochrane, who was seriously injured nearly a month ago by a kick from a vicious horse, and underwent three weeks successful treatment at the Kingston general hospital, has arrived again nearly fully recovered.

Mr. Hicks, of Peterboro, is a welcome guest of Mr. and Mrs. S. Ball.

The brothers Gustav, Erich and Albert Warrich, former Denbigh boys, but for some years citizens of Vanbrugh in Renfrew county, are taking a couple of weeks vacation and are enjoying a pleasant visit with relatives here at their former home.

Dr. J. Adams' kitchen roof got on fire at noon on the 30th ult. from sparks or a defective chimney. Thanks to the prompt service a number of neighbors were promptly on hand and succeeded in confining the loss to the kitchen roof, which is covered by insurance.

A more serious loss occurred on the 31st ult. when the dwelling house and barn of Alfred Bebee with all contents, were totally destroyed by fire, which probably also was caused by sparks or a defective chimney.

They Want what they read about

The standards of living for the average family in Canada grow higher each year. The luxuries of yesterday are the necessities of to-day. People in the smaller towns and on farms want the newer things they read about.

Dry Goods Stores, Grocers, Shoe, Hardware and Paint Stores, in the smaller towns, all find they can show the newest things by carrying small stocks of them and re-ordering by Long Distance. The jobber or manufacturer's warehouse is at their elbow — their order departments are alert for telephone trade!

Shipments are often made the same day. Up-to-dateness of merchandise is no longer confined to the big city stores — and large sums are not locked up in stock.

Try it. Have a big store in a small town. "Use the Bell to Sell" — and to Buy.

PARLIAMENTARY LETTER

The budget debate winds on its way ; something like the brook, but as all things must come to an end, members are talking of a vote on the Drayton amendment by about Tuesday or Wednesday of this week. There has been little change in the arguments ; occasionally a Progressive member gets up and makes a first class Liberal speech, but on the whole their argument is an agreement with the government that it has done the very best it could under the hard situation facing the country.

The Progressives have no love for the Drayton amendment for they see in it something that is political and critical without being in any way helpful to the country. The Conservatives have produced no suggestion which would better the condition of the country, the Progressives in the main argue, and therefore they have no right to ask for the support of the third party in their attempt to discredit the government.

Even among the Conservatives themselves the Drayton amendment has not been hailed with any great display of joy. True at the winding up of the most of the Conservative speeches, most of the members announce that they will support the amendment because they do not believe the government has carried out the promises made by it, and for it during and previous to the last election campaign. Some of the Conservative members, while doing that, equally critize the government for its reduction of customs duties, and for not decreasing them further. Altogether their argument in this debate has lost some of its strength. Their one point on which attacks centre is the removal of the provision for force appreciation of depreciated foreign currency. They claim, and their claim is being supported at times by the Progressives, that this gives German goods a chance to flood Canadian markets to the disadvantage of Canadian-made goods. On the other hand, however, Mr. Fielding pointed out, that the German goods were coming in as much under the old provisions as they could do under the new, the only difference being that under the old law Canadian importers were unable to buy these foreign made goods direct, but must pay enhanced prices to middlemen in Holland and other countries. If that was the case, and there has been nothing produced by the Conservatives to combat the argument, it would appear that the currency provision in the last budget failed of their object and therefore were not worth retaining.

Another of the Conservative objections is voiced in the provisions of the Marking Act. So far the Government supporters have not taken this objection very seriously, beyond pointing out that the previous government had the Marking Act in its hands from May last until its defeat in December, and apparently thought so little of it that it never brought the provisions into effect, but left things lying for the new government to throw overboard.

One of the striking attacks against the currency valuation regulations in the new budget came from Hon. J. M. Baxter, New Brunswick Conservative, who after arguing against everything in general, wound up with a peroration declaring that as far as the Germans and Austrians were concerned, instead of making trade for them easier he would see the whole of the nations starve rather than extend them a dollar of money, or a bushel of wheat to keep them on the face of the earth.

R. A. Hoey, of Springfield, contributed greatly to the debate when he spoke from the Progressive benches on Wednesday and upheld the government's policy as a step in the right direction. There were places where Mr. Hoey followed the lines of other Progressives in finding fault with some of the contents of the budget, but he admitted that he could not suggest anything that was much better.

The debate is dragging along ; now in the doldrums and now lifted to a higher plane as when another forceful speaker gets up and adds his few words to the arguments of the day. The end was very near on Tuesday night when King, of Huron, finished his contribution ahead of his schedule and sat down with nobody else prepared to step into the breach and keep things going. The Speaker was on his feet and had called the question of the Drayton amendment when Neill, of Comox-Alberni, got the floor and managed to adjourn the debate, carrying it over for another day. It would have been rather a peculiar ending had it come, with none of the three leaders having spoken. Now it looks as though they would get into action about Tuesday, and then the bands will play, and the end come with a crash.

On the face of things there should not be anything to delay parliament after about June 20th. With the budget debate and resolutions out of the way, say the end of the present week, as there is a prospect of them being dispensed with, there remains practically only the Wheat Board, Railway Rates, and Soldier Legislation to be put through. The rest of the matters on the order paper should not take very long to dispose of and if the House takes a week on these three that should be long enough.

The Railway Costs Committee is driving along bearing a lot of witnesses for and against resumption of the Crow's Nest Pass agreement. So far it appears as if the provinces of Ontario and Quebec are against the agreement, and three for it. The main part of the argument, naturally, is coming from the three prairie provinces, while the railways who have already put in their case, claim they are going to suffer a loss of some ten million dollars each by the agreement being brought back into force. The Railway Commission occasionally comes in for an attack on the ground that it has refused to assist the west in what are termed its lawful demands, but even in the west it has an occasional champion who lays down the fact that the Commission governed by certain laws which it must interpret. While it would seem risky to prejudge the report of the committee, at this distance it seems very unlikely that the west will get what it wants there, namely, the bringing back into force of the agreement of 1897.

VALUE OF CHEESE AS FOOD KINGSTON PRESBYTERIAL

ITS CONSUMPTION IS THREE TIMES MORE PER CAPITA IN BRITAIN THAN IN CANADA

A companion pamphlet to Miss Helen G. Campbell's "Why and How to Use Milk" has been published by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. This phamplet is entitled "Why and How to Use Cheese." Besides giving a history of cheese making and of the different kinds of cheese—of which it will surprise most people to hear there are some 250—upwards of three dozen methods are described in which cheese can be used to make savory and nutritious dishes.

All cheese making in Canada was carried on as a farm industry until 1864, when the first factory came into existence in Oxford county, Ontario. In the following year a factory was established in Missisquoi county Quebec. The progress of factory establishment was so rapid that in a few years the system was generally adopted, and farm-made cheese became a rarity. While every one of the nine provinces has its cheese factories, about 90 per cent. of the production has to be credited to Ontario and Quebec. Incidentally it might be mentioned that the total value of the cheese made in this country runs up to between thirty-five and forty million dollars per annum, and the quantity totals up to around a hundred and fifty million pounds, sometimes over and sometimes under. The variation in production is considerable, as will be understood when it is stated that in 1914 it was 169,478,240 lbs. and in 1920 nearly twenty million pounds less.

In Canadian factories the manufacture of cheese is mostly confined to what is known as Cheddar, but genuine Stilton is turned out on the Dominion Experimental Farm at Agassiz, B.C., and the Trappists monks at the Oka Agricultural Institute in Quebec make what is known as Oka cheese. Another form of cheese made in this country is Cottage cheese, which is made in many households from sour skim-milk without the aid of rennet. For Cream cheese there is also a demand of some dimension. Miss Campbell dwells upon the advantages of cheese in the diet, tells how it can best be kept, and suggests that Canadians would be well advised to eat more of it than they do. This suggestion gains force from the fact that the consumption of cheese in Britain is about four times per capita more than it is in this country.

KINGSTON PRESBYTERIAL

The eighth annual meeting of the Kingston Presbyterial W.M.S. was held in St. Andrew's church, Napanee, May 25th and 26th. Almost eighty enthusiastic delegates attended, and Miss Hume, the President, presided, except at the opening evening service when Rev. Mr. Wilson, pastor of St. Andrew's church, kindly took charge and conveyed greetings from the Presbytery, the church, and the town, to the Presbyterial. Miss Mitchell, W.M.S. Field Secretary, addressed the meeting, speaking of the increasing immigration into our country, our responsibility to these new comers, and the wonderful work of missionaries in centres like Wakaw, Ethelbert, Vegreville, Point aux Trembles, etc., and that love for our fathers, love for those sacrificed overseas, love for Canada, and love for our Saviour is shown by our loving service to these foreigners.

Miss Keswatt, Kingston, gave an excellent detailed report of the meetings of the General Council recently held in Galt.

Excellent reports were received from the various Secretaries showing progress and increased interest in their various lines of work.

Some hints from Mrs. Duff, retiring Secretary, may be of special value to Auxiliaries. Send what, when, and as you are requested. One late package holds up the whole shipment. A few good interesting books in good condition are acceptable, but no trash. Send boots and stockings, when necessary, but the money is better. Put lists of new clothing ; also 2nd list of second-hand clothing in bales ; also put the name of Auxiliary and contents on the outside of bale.

Moved and seconded that the names of Auxiliaries, who packed and shipped according to required, be read at next Presbyterial. Also names of Auxiliaries who failed to do so.

The following officers were elected : President, Miss Hume, Stirling ; 1st Vice-President, Miss Hughes, Kingston ; 2nd Vice-President, Mrs. H. J. Sharpe, Belleville ; 3rd Vice-President, Mrs. J. A. Maclaren, Pittsburgh ; 4th Vice-President, Mrs. Duff, Kingston ; 5th Vice-President, Mrs. S. W. Dyde, Kingston ; Treasurer, Mrs. J. Diack, Kingston ; recording secretary, Miss M. M. Ross, Kingston ; corresponding secretary, Mrs. John E. Gow, Kingston ; Mission Band secretary, Mrs. W. H. Jenkins, Madoc ; assistant Mission Band secretary, Mrs. Jackson, Kingston ; home helper secretary, Mrs. G. A. Reid, Belleville ; strangers' secretary, Mrs. Harry McLean, Pittsburgh ; library and literature secretary, Mrs. Morrice, Belleville ; young women's secretary, Mrs. G. Barlow, Trenton ; press secretary, Mrs. F. P. Smith, Victoria ; supply secretary, Mrs. Pahl and Mrs. Swain, Kingston ; "Messenger" secretary, Mrs. H. Hill, Belleville ; Watchword movement secretary, Mrs. W. S. Carruthers, Belleville.

Miss Mackay, Japan, addressed the meeting, telling of conditions in Japan before the introduction of christianity, the beginnings of the work for Christ, and gradual developements until now they have many denominations working together, the Presbyterians having 290 self sustaining churches with 35,000 members. They also have schools for girls and boys, and a university for women.

Information asked for in the question drawer was very aptly given by Miss Mackay, her remarks being very helpful and educative.

A Finance Committee composed of the President, Treasurer, Corresponding and Recording Secretaries was formed to devise ways and means to meet the requirements of the budget.

The Presbyterial will meet next year in St. Andrew's Church, Kingston.

Delicious meals were served the delegates from tables laden with good things, and beautifully decorated with tulips and lilies-of-the-valley, by the local Auxiliary in the lecture room of the church.

Music was furnished at the evening sessions by St. Andrew's church choir, and several of their number rendered solos and duets all of which were inspiring and much appreciated. Miss Christine Diack, of Kingston, also rendered a solo very pleasingly.

Representatives from the sister societies of Trinity Methodist, Grace Methodist, and the Anglican churches conveyed greetings from their societies and expressed pleasure at being able to be present as corresponding members of a meeting where hearts are bound together in a common service. "Our fears, our hopes, our aims are one."

RESOLUTIONS

We, the members of the Kingston Presbyterial, in session in St. Andrew's church, Napanee, resolve :

1. That we tender to our beloved President and the Presbyterial Board, our gratitude and appreciation for the service they have rendered during the past year. To learn that some members of the Board feel obliged to give up the work which they have done so faithfully and well.

2. That we express to our missionaries home on furlough our appreciation of their services.

3. We place ourselves on record as in favor of some portion of biblical instruction being universal in the schools of our country.

4. That we view with apprehension the spread of Mormonism in Canada, and would petition the General Assembly to take action to protect our young people from the danger of Mormonism.

5. That we are opposed to the manufacture and sale of distilled liquors for beverage purposes, and will support the government in helping stamp out intemperance from our land.

6. Sympathy is extended to the members of the Presbyterial who have suffered bereavement during the year.

7. That we pledge ourselves to do our best to raise our share of the budget.

8. To the pastor, session, W.M.S. Auxiliaries, choir, soloists and hostesses we extend the thanks and gratitude of this Presbyterial.

9. That we deplore the state of unrest in the land. That the spirit of Christ be distilled into the hearts of men.

10. That we as a body reconsecrate ourselves through constant prayer and earnest bible study. That we do all in our power to promote the Forward Movement throughout the Presbyterial in the church and in the home.

11. We feel the year that has closed has been one of countless opportunities, strenuous activities, and feel the need of more consecrated workers, and greater faithfulness in every department in order to reach the goal, "Christ for the world, and the world for Christ."

SUNNY CALIFORNIA'S BEST KNOWN MALE QUARTETTE COMING TO CHAUTAUQUA

From Los Angeles comes California's best known, singing male quartette, assisted by Alice Spencer Rand, pianist. The "Pacific Coast Musician" said recently : "The members have good, well-balanced voices, and sing with likable verve." They have filled many important concert engagements, notably at the Temple Baptist Church, Los Angeles, and in recital with Gurnie Jacobs Bond, in the same city. The four singers have sung together for four seasons and have arrived at a practically perfect blending in ensemble efforts. The personnel is Mr. Chester Foster Rand, first tenor and manager ; Mr. C. O. Valdo Emerson, second tenor and humorist ; Mr. James Ross MacKenzie, baritone and Scotch impersonator ; Mr. John W. Lince, basso ; Mrs. Alice Spencer Rand, accompanist.

The programme is a delightful arrangement of classical, semi-classical, and popular numbers—accompanied and unaccompanied—in quartettes, trios, duets, and solos. Specialty solos in Irish and Scotch costume, impersonative readings, and pianologues add variety to a fine programme.

THE FRENCH PROBLEM.

It Has Spread From Quebec Into Vermont.

Ontario is not alone in receiving an overflow of population from the French-speaking of the Province of Quebec. Attention has been drawn of late to the French communities in northern Vermont which have resulted from emigration from the Quebec side of the border. It has come as a surprise to some of the New England people, however, to be told by the St. Alban's Daily Mail that there are public schools in Vermont where the French language is being used in the ordinary instruction of pupils, at least for a part of the day.

There are communities in that section where English is almost completely French in speech, and in some of these it is quite necessary, in order to make any progress in the teaching of the children, to use their mother tongue for at least a part of their instruction. This tendency is likely to increase, for it is said that the immigration of neighborhoods in Vermont along the Quebec line is continuing progressively. New England authorities, however, do not express any alarm, as it is deemed that the Americanizing influence is stronger than any influence that might be exercised from Quebec.

St. Alban's, it may be remembered in passing, once had its place in history in the incident known as the St. Alban's Raid." On the 19th of October, 1864, Lieut. Bennett H. Young led from Canada about 25 un-uniformed Confederates in a raid on St. Alban's. They looted three banks, wounded several citizens—one mortally—and escaped to Canada, where Young and 12 others were arrested and brought to trial. But they were never punished, and even the $75,000 which had been taken from them on their arrest was returned to them. Later, however, the Canadian Government refunded $84,000 of the $90,000 in 1866 and again in 1870 the Fenians made St. Alban's a base for attacks on Canada, and United States troops were sent to protect the city.

St. Alban's lies on the shore of Lake Champlain, a few miles from the Canadian border, which here possesses no natural markings excepting iron posts at intervals of a mile. The roads crossing the boundary lead one almost unconsciously from one country into the other, though now they are doubtless well protected by police against the operations of bootleggers.

"Some Grouch."

A certain little caddie very popular with the members of a well-known Canadian golf club had the misfortune to lose his right leg in 1866 and again in 1870 the Fenians made St. Alban's a base for attacks on Canada, and United States troops were sent to protect the city.

RED MEN OF THE WEST

BLANKET INDIAN LIVED IN "LAND OF SUNSET."

Col. G. O. Shields, an Old-Timer, Writes Book In Which He Gives an Account of Fishing In British Columbia, and Also the Custer Massacre.

Col. G. O. Shields, an old-timer who has lived among the Indians, has written a large volume of study and reminiscence entitled "The Blanket Indian of the Northwest." This particular Indian is the one who used to array himself in a red blanket, beaded buckskin shirt and leggings, gorgeous war bonnet of eagle plumes, and who painted his face, his hands and his horse in bright colors. In particular this Indian represents the great Sioux nation, and Col. Shields delivers himself of personal anecdotes of such famous figures as Crazy Horse, Sitting Bull, Chief Gall and Rain-in-the-Face. These are the names that bring us back to our dime novels. How many a ten-cent hero has wormed his way through the tonwoods toward the war camps of these chiefs in those old days when we boasted a stack of novels in the barn, when the world was young!

One anecdote that he gives certainly exhibits the Indian as Gargantuan in his appetite. Some years ago Col. Shields employed two Indians to go with him into the high mountains of British Columbia for Rocky Mountain goats. One of the Indians disappeared; and it developed that he was salmon hunting. Tying a large hook to a pole, this Indian had gone out to the lower end of a lake and put his pole down in the water, drawing it up with a jerk every ten or twenty seconds. He had not made many yanks before he hooked a huge salmon weighing at least fifty pounds. Staggering under this load, he came back to camp, and the two Indians proceeded to roast the salmon. Col. Shields took for his share a three-pound slice, ate it, and then crawled into his sleeping-bag with visions of a banquet of cold roast salmon. At times during the night he was dimly disturbed by the activities of the Indians about the camp fire. In the morning, when Col. Shields awoke with a desire for breakfast, he found the Indians sleeping like babies and nothing left of the salmon except the backbone and tail. The Indians had sat up practically all night and eaten completely a thirty-pound salmon.

It is not long before Col. Shields slips into an account of the famous Custer massacre. The chief in charge of the great Indian army, he declares, was Crazy Horse, although it is popularly supposed that Sitting Bull had command. Sitting Bull, explains Col. Shields, was a medicine man and never a war chief. It was his duty to work the braves up to frenzy before battle. Rain-in-the-Face, who had escaped from the Standing Rock Agency, where he was held for murder, joined his own tribe just before they went to the Little Big Horn. Col. Shields declares that he talked with Rain-in-the-Face just before this fighter went forward to join Crazy Horse.

He asked him, through an interpreter, "Where did you go when you escaped from the jail at Standing Rock?" He said:

"I went to the camp of my friends at the base of Woody Mountain, in Canada."

How far is that?" I asked "Three hundred miles as the crow flies."

"How long did it take you to make that run?" "Three days and nights."

"Do you mean to tell me that a man can run a hundred miles in twenty-four hours on snowshoes, and another hundred in the next twenty-four hours, and another hundred in the next?" He said, "I did it."

"How often did you sleep on the way?" "I didn't sleep at all."

"What did you eat on the way?" I asked. "Browse. When I would cross a dry coulee I would break off a handful of brush, willows or box elder and eat it as I ran across the next plateau, maybe ten miles, or twenty miles, or thirty miles.

"After running two days and nights and the greater part of the third day, late in the afternoon the wind lulled, the snow cleared from the air for a few minutes, and I saw the dim outline of Woody Mountain towering away into the sky. I put on a new burst of speed, and after running a few miles the wind lulled again, the air cleared, and I saw the outline of the great buffalo forest that surrounds the base of the mountains; that I saw three little columns of blue smoke curling up among the trees.

"I knew this meant the camp of my friends. I knew there were no other Indians and no white men in the forest at that time of the year. Again I was inspired, and again I forged ahead. When I got within three miles of the forest I began to yell, giving first the war-whoop, followed by the wail of distress. At first there was no response, but I kept on shouting as I ran. Finally I heard the answering yell of the first succession. I knew what that meant. It meant that my friends had heard my call and that they would come to me. I kept going, and a few minutes later I saw six men break from the cover of the forest and come toward me on a run. And that was the last I did know for two days and nights."

Here is a narrative that outranks the famous Greek Marathon. Rain-in-the-Face recovered, however, in time to take part in the Custer massacre. He commanded the left wing in that memorable battle, negrly 1,000 picked warriors. It was a terrible massacre. From every point of the compass yelling Indians arose, pouring a deadly fire into the brave little command of "the White Chief with the Yellow Hair." In thirty minutes after the first shot was fired Custer and all his men were dead.

STORY OF J. G. HOWARD.

The Man Who Presented High Park to Toronto.

In response to a public agitation Colborne Lodge, the almost forgotten home of one of the great men of Toronto's early days, is being renovated and will be opened to the public. Colborne Lodge was given to the citizens of Toronto by John G. Howard, who gave to the city, as well the beautiful High Park; his fine collection of paintings by himself and his wife, mostly representing scenes in the city's early history; a collection of photographs of a similar nature; a collection of sketches drawn by himself in connection with his architectural work, and a collection of early books and prints.

Where are these donations now? High Park is the rendezvous on week days of myriad picnic or sleighing parties, on Sundays and holidays of thousands of seekers after the open spaces; Colborne Lodge is almost in ruins, unsafe for the entrance of a human being; his paintings, photographs and sketches are largely in one of the committee rooms at the City Hall. There is a strong feeling that all should be segregated at Colborne Lodge when the building is at last opened to the public.

Who was J. G. Howard? It must be admitted that the average person's idea of the life and character of this great builder of Canada—for he was truly one of the men who helped to make Canada a nation—is very hazy.

John Howard was an Englishman by birth. It was in 1832 that he decided to emigrate to Canada. He took passage in a boat sailing from Gravesend. He kept a very extensive journal of his voyage, which might almost be called the "Diary of a Seasick Land Lubber," but which makes mighty interesting reading, even at this distance.

His adventures began from the moment the boat sailed. He was at the boat on the day it was due to sail, but the boat did not sail. After waiting around two or three days with no sign of the rather self-opinionated captain lifting anchor, Howard decided to go ashore at Gravesend and make some purchase. It was at this unfortunate moment that the captain decided to pull up his anchors and start for Canada. Howard was left on the shore, and arrived back at the landing place to see his vessel speeding down the Thames Norewards. He jumped into the nearest rowboat, tossed five shillings—a big sum in those days—to the owner of the boat and started in pursuit of the vessel. Muscular energy proved to be a mightier motive force than the elements, and the rowboat overtook the sailboat after an hour of rowing.

The captain and the two mates of the boat, not to mention the majority of the sailors, were given to their drop of rum, and managed to remain in an inebriated condition for a very large proportion of the voyage. As they neared Canada the captain and his co-wassailers began to celebrate, and left the boat to shift for itself. The ship started to drive on the rocks. "Judge of my feelings," wrote Mr. Howard, "when the first object that met my view"—when he came up on deck—"was the shore, with tremendous rocks running out into the sea and the breakers dashing over them in a fearful manner. Horror was depicted on every countenance, women clasping their children to their arms and their husbands running around the deck like madmen."

By his coolness and presence of mind, Howard was able to render such service that the vessel was not dashed on the rocks. Soon the wind veered around and saved the vessel from destruction.

After eleven weeks and three days of travelling Howard arrived in Toronto — on the 14th of September, 1832. He had letters to the Hon. Peter Robinson and after many disappointments was able to see Sir John Colborne, the Governor-General, who was the first to befriend him in the new land, and appointed him a master at Upper Canada College.

It was in December, 1837, that he moved to Colborne Lodge. On Christmas Day of that year he shot a deer and some quail in High Park, near Bloor street. In the same month he came into prominence by commanding a scouting party that went up Yonge street to attack William Lyon Mackenzie and the "rebels" who had gathered at Montgomery's tavern.

Of the later life of John Howard it may be said that it was a succession of achievements in the building of homes, colleges, schools, business institutions, garrison halls, etc., for Toronto and to some extent for places throughout Ontario. Few of the buildings are standing to-day for the city's growth has planted industries and offices where residential homes once stood and skyscrapers have replaced corner provision stores.

The great saddening event of Mr. Howard's life was the death of his life's partner in 1877. Mrs. Howard was buried in High Park and over her grave was erected a cairn of stones, surmounted by a Maltese cross. On her death Howard wrote some verses beginning:

"A rustic cairn in hallowed ground
Surmounted by a myste cross——"

How many of the thousands who pass the spot in High Park now think of it as hallowed ground? If the number is few, the public is not to be blamed, not having the story brought to them in any way from one end of the year to the other.

The Air In Mars.

The air is very much thinner on Mars than on the earth, so thin, in fact, according to one scientific authority, that an elephant there would be able to leap about like a gazelle."

A City of 100,000 Telephones.

Toronto claims to have a higher percentage of telephones than any other city in the British Empire—namely, 100,000, or one to every five persons.

Canadian Writes About Poets

It seems rather curious to find the University of Alberta the address of a scholar who has devoted much time, thought and care to the production of a work upon the Poets Laureate of England, yet Edmund Kemper Broadus, professor of English at the university, has written what is the first book upon that subject we have ever come across. He finds the beginnings of the office far back in the middle ages when it was the custom of courts to have among their entourage men who would entertain the bored monarchs with songs or would flatter them with tributes to their exaggerated deeds of prowess. These troubadors and minstrels were probably as ancient an institution as that of king's jester, but while the latter has long been obsolete the singers have in course of time become officially recognized as the crowned poets although their present function is far different from what it was originally.

The office was established officially in 1668 when John Dryden was made poet laureate, although hundreds of years earlier there were poets who were referred to as laureates. This title, however, had to do with their academic degrees, which began to be distributed after the founding of Oxford. Prof. Broadus' researches, therefore, confirm the general impression that John Dryden was the first poet laureate. He was also one of the best. He had the idea that the function of his office was to act as a kind of poet-advocate and spokesman for the court. He was the royal propagandist, and, as Prof. Broadus says, it would be hard to find a more perfect example of official poetry than his "Absoalum and Achitophel." But even this recommendation, we suppose, will hardly drive many readers to peruse it.

Dryden's successor did not have this view of their duties. Indeed until we come down to Southey it is doubtful if the poet laureate had any views worthy of respect on any matter. Certainly they were not able to get them expressed in verse. One and all they were appointed for some personal reason, for some service or servility they had rendered whoever had the appointing. As an example of the sort of genius that was made poet laureate we may mention Nahum Tate, who followed Shadwell, the successor of Dryden. Tate rewrote Shakespeare and turned the Bible into verse. Tate, we are told, was the greatest sycophant who ever held the office to which he was appointed by the Lord Chamberlain, and not by the King as had been the case with his predecessors. From Tate's time the poet laureate has ranked next to as a member of the King's household as distinct from an officer of the state.

Rowe, who followed him, was his superior in every respect. He was appointed on the understanding that he should write two odes every year, one on New Year's and the other on the King's birthday. These odes were meant to be sung, so the business of the poet was to supply suitable words for already existing airs. Eusden, the next in line has been held by competent judges to have been the worst poet among the laureates, but Prof. Broadus thinks he hardly fair that he should be singled out. Pye, who died in 1813, was probably as bad, but he achieved something for the office because as the result of a precedent established when he was laureate all subsequent laureates were relieved of the necessity of writing two odes. The reason for this was that the insanity of George III. was thought to make it inappropriate that he should be metrically hailed on his birthday.

Southey, who followed Pye, refused to write except when moved by the spirit to do so. He was not only a fine poet, but he produced some of his finest work while filling the position, and perhaps this can be said of none of the others except Tennyson, who in his forty-two years incumbency of the office raised it to a place in the popular esteem which it had never before occupied. Wordsworth accepted the office on the understanding that it conferred no obligation whatever upon him, and in his seven years in office wrote not a single line which could be construed as pertaining to the laureateship. Alfred Austin was appointed by Lord Salisbury because as a journalist he had rendered useful service. Robert Bridges was appointed by Mr. Asquith for reasons that never were apparent to readers. It is understood that Kipling could have had the appointment he had desired, but this, like other official honors, he declined.

Will Carry Old Flag.

For the first time since 1866, when it was carried at the head of the Sandwich Company of volunteers, formed to oppose the invasion of the Fenians a tattered old British flag was borne at the head of the parade of Canadian soldiers, when Lord Byng of Vimy, visited Winnsor recently.

The flag, which was presented to the Sandwich volunteers of which the late Senator C. E. Casgrain was captain, was carried by the late Ensign George Gray, when the Fenians threatened to cross the Detroit river. The British emblem was passed on to the sisters of Ensign Gray, Sandwich, who gave it to the Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire.

Emphatic Brevity.

While the evening party was over, and most of the guests had gone As one young man took leave of his hostess the lady said. "I'm sorry you found [illegible] a good deal of [illegible]." "Poor convey [illegible]," exclaimed the guest. "She's the limit! Why the only thing she said to me the entire evening was 'No,' and I had to propose to her to get that out of her."

DO WOMEN WORK AS HARD AS MEN?

Yes. And They Must Keep Well and Strong

Two Interesting Letters

Toronto, Ontario.—"When my husband was called back to England in 1914 I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to strengthen me so I could work. I had a trouble that used to make me weak, but I am able to do my work now and am perfectly satisfied with your medicine. I still get it at the chemist's and I strongly recommend it to anybody I hear of suffering as I did. You may publish this if you wish." —Mrs. E. Hounslower, 899 Yonge St., Toronto, Ontario.

I Did Not Feel Like Working

"I was in a general run-down condition with a weak back and a tired feeling so that I did not feel like working. My mother was taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and recommended it to me, so I have taken it and my back is better and I am now able to do my work. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to my neighbors and you may publish my letter."—Mrs. Josephat A. Gagnon, Box 47, Carbon, Alberta.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound should be taken when you first notice such symptoms as nervousness, backache, weakness and irregularity. It will help you and prevent more serious trouble. Give it a fair trial.

Gingham Checks in Silk.

Taffeta dresses in small gingham checks are trimmed in ruffles of valenciennes lace, and in these the brown and white check with the tiniest even valenciennes is well liked. Inset embroidered squares of batiste are used in many of these taffetas for dress wear and for the party frocks quaint shades are used. These are trimmed in laces and embroideries of all kinds and many of them have the most novel sleeve treatments, sometimes just the merest suggestion of a sleeve.

FIGHTING THE SANDS

WILLOW AND POPLAR ARE USED TO HALT THEM.

Strange Battle Going on In Prince Edward County, Where Wind-Driven Hills Have Swamped Many Farms — Nursery Station Established and Good Work Is Now Making Headway.

The Ontario Government is winning in its fight against the "Sand Banks" of Prince Edward county. Judging by present progress, in a very few years the famous moving hills in the southwest corner of the "Island" county will soon be reduced to their position previous to the middle of the last century.—simply mounds of fine sand covered with forest growth.

Seventy-five years ago the sand banks area consisted of high hills with swampy valleys between. On the land side, the hills was a fair growth of timber, while in the hollows an excellent stand of cedar had reached maturity. On the lake side of the hills there was some scrubby bush and much grass. Lumbering removed the tree protection and continual cattle grazing killed the grass, giving the prevailing northwest winds a chance to loosen up the soil. By 1852 the whole mass was in motion, steadily covering the crown lands beneath thirty feet of sand and leaving nothing but a marsh behind.

Little serious attempt was made to halt the banks of sand until private holdings became menaced. Then some local effort was put forth, grasses were experimented with and Holland willows were planted by laying branches in shallow trenches. The attempts only succeed in hindering the sand and roads and good fields were buried and buildings had to be moved out of the path of the "banks." On the north side, West Lake was shortened by seven hundred feet, while east of this, with nothing to stop it, the sand swept forward more than half a mile in the past seventy years. On the southeast side, dense clumps of cedars have halted the banks, though many of the trees have become buried and all of them, until last year, were imperilled.

Last season the Ontario Forestry Branch came on the scene and under the direction of A. H. Richardson opened hostilities against the "banks." Profiting by the experience of private planters, shallow trenches sixty feet apart on the landward side of the "banks" were filled with willow branches and cuttings of poplars and willow were planted between the solid belts. While the cuttings have not done so well, the limb plantings have made an excellent start, an average growth of three feet being registered, while some of the roots we traced have grown fifteen feet and all were planted out last year," said Mr. Richardson.

The past winter, according to Mr. Richardson, has been the most severe from the standpoint of winds in the past decade, sand driven against the willow shoots barking them on one side, and in some cases severing them off close to the ground. The wood left has the appearance of having been sandpapered. In view of these handicaps the present growth is most satisfactory, and the forestry officials are satisfied that they have the "banks" under control.

Some land is being purchased by the Forestry Branch at the foot of the sand hills and some under them for the purpose of establishing a distributing nursery station and also to give the owners some compensation for the good soil buried. At this station planting material will be stored, as it is intended to cover the entire "banks" with belts of willow and thicken up the hollows and sections between limb plantings with jack pine, cedar and other more valuable trees. One hundred and fifty acres have been planted and the remainder — between four and five hundred acres—will be covered in the near future.

While the Sand Banks of Prince Edward offer an extreme example of what may be expected when timber growth is removed from light soils and the same excessively pastured, a partial repetition of the drifting dunes near West Lake is going on in many parts of the province. Along the north shore of Lake Erie, particularly in Norfolk county, several former fair agricultural fields have been already abandoned, while along the ridge north of Lake Ontario from York county to Rice Lake there is a belt of territory which is not only of little value itself, but threatens surrounding fair agricultural land.

Getting Ready.

All day Mrs. Dearwife had awaited her husband's footsteps that she might tell him the tremendous news. Her anxiety was painful to see as she paced the floors of the various rooms dozens of times, waiting—waiting!

At last she heard his well-known key turn in the lock, and she rushed to greet him.

"Oh, Adolphus," she cried, "baby can talk!"

"No!" he said, trembling with joy.

"Yes," she insisted, casting herself into his arms. She had on a frock of saccharino silk, and he had never seen her look sweeter. "He can talk —he can talk!" she kept crying, as she led him up the stairs to the nursery. The baby was sitting up in his cradle, playing with a rattle. They hid behind the door. "He only knows five words," she whispered, "and he says them all the time. Listen!"

"Boo coo gah da sh-h!" said the baby, distinctly.

Wonderingly the father stepped into the room. "Good gracious!" he mused. "How does he know that at his age?" And the next day he bought a full set of school books, pencils, and things, so as to be ready in time.

Canada's most Popular Car The Chevrolet 490

PUBLIC favor changes when reasons for a change are obvious. Public opinion as to the most popular car of the future is changing.

Users of low-priced motor transportation are demanding completely equipped automobiles, modern in every respect, with nothing left to buy but the license plate. The new Superior Chevrolet is fully equipped, including motor-driven 3-speed forward and reverse, sliding gear transmission, standard service and hand brakes, electric starter, demountable rims, water and oil pumps and speedometer. In addition to completeness, buyers insist on real economy in four important essentials. They demand low initial cost; low gasoline consumption; low repair costs; and long tire life. The new Chevrolet excells in these particulars. Twenty-five to thirty miles on a gallon of gasoline is not uncommon. It excells in oil economy as well. Repair costs are low, because every Chevrolet part is built to give long life under hard conditions.

You owe it to yourself to examine the new Chevrolet, the car which is establishing a new standard and has become Canada's most popular car.

EVERY GOOD THING

IN THIS WORLD IS THE FRUIT OF SACRIFICE

Can you think of any good thing which we to-day enjoy that has not been bought with the blood of martyrs?

Our churches, our schools, our freedom—all were paid for because enough men and women before us were imbued with the ideal of wishing to leave the world a better place to live in by virtue of their having been here.

Though some divine provision there seems to be in nearly every community at least one such person. Occasionally, you will find a town where there is no one who is willing to assume any responsibility whatever in an effort to do something for others. The plight of such a town is pitiable indeed.

In most towns, however, you will not only find one but many such persons. In these towns, there is a vibrant atmosphere that is contagious. There is something in the place that makes the heart beat young, that makes young men feel like staying there instead of rushing off to a city. In such places property values are on the increase, folks are happy, and life is worth living.

Beware of the town which lacks unselfish leadership! In such a place its most revered institution is the cemetery.

Tamworth Defeats Yarker.

The visiting Tamworth team defeated Yarker by 9 to 4 in the Inter-County baseball game at the latter village on Wednesday evening. Quite a number of errors occurred throughout the game, though the pitching was very good, and with good fielding support the score should have been cut away down. There was a good crowd for the game. The umpires were Richardson, of Tamworth, and Stewart of Yarker.

ODESSA

Mrs. Ashton Amey, accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Perry, of Napanee, left last Tuesday to attend the graduation of Mrs. Amey's daughter, Miss Rae Amey, from the Toronto general hospital.

The walking veterans arrived here on Sunday forenoon, not as pedestrians, as the courtesy of the Napanee people had planned otherwise. They were brought in automobiles of the citizens. A dinner was prepared for them and served in Urban Snider's field opposite the drill shed.

The entrance examinations were held here on Saturday afternoon, May 27th. Fifteen pupils of Miss Nickle's class, and over forty from other schools attended.

A very interesting baseball game was played by the local team at Tamworth on Wednesday, May 24th. It was especially interesting in the Odessa boys as the score was 7 to 5 in their favor. There was also an exhibition game played here on Saturday afternoon, May 27th, by the locals and Enterprise teams which ended in their favor, the score being 19 to 5.

The many friends of Sandford Thompson were very sorry to hear that he passed away on Friday, May 26th of pneumonia. The funeral was held from his late home Sunday afternoon, Rev. G. Nickle officiating. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends. Interment took place in Centreville, the remains being placed by the side of his mother who predeceased him less than a month ago.

Mr. and Mrs. James McQueen and Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Sproule spent a recent Sunday with friends in Hartington.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hegadorn entertained about one hundred of their relatives and friends at their home on Friday night, May 26th, the occasion being their twentieth wedding anniversary. There were many handsome and useful gifts presented during the esteem in which the host and hostess are held. The evening was spent very enjoyably with music and dancing, and delicious refreshments were served at the midnight lunch.

A social dance was held in the township hall on Tuesday night. The music was furnished by Jos. Lawlor and Fred Hodge.

Visitors: Mrs. J. B. Aylesworth, Mrs. Paul and Mrs. McKim and children, Newburgh, spent Thursday at Robert Ham's; Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Kendall and little son, Clyde, Toronto, are guests of Mrs. Thomas Clyde; Mrs. M. Ovens, Fort William, spent a few days with Mr. and Mrs. James Denyes; Mrs. Kyle and little daughter, Annie May, Kingston, spent the week-end with Mrs. H. Freemantle; Mr. and Mrs. Carleton Dougherty and little son, Keith, were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Dougherty; Mrs. E. Joyce, David Joyce and Miss Frankie Joyce, Sydenham, spent a recent Thursday at B. L. King's; Mrs. Parker, who has been spending a few days with Mrs. Sidney Sproule has returned to her home in Kingston.

TIGER TIRE & RUBBER COMPANY STATEMENT SHOWS PROFIT OF $28,191 IN FIRST SIX MONTHS OF OPERATION

BUSINESS STEADILY INCREASING, WITH SALES RUNNING AT APPROXIMATELY $700,000 PER YEAR—FIRST DIVIDEND TO BE PAID IN JULY

"After operating for only a period of six and a half months, your Company was able to earn net profits of $28,191." This statement by Hilliary & Co., Auditors, was received with much satisfaction by the shareholders attending the annual general meeting of the Tiger Tire Rubber Co., Limited, held at Belleville, Wednesday, May 10th.

The Financial Statement presented showed the Company to be in a strong financial position, having a surplus of $35,486 over liabilities to the public. Inventories have been reduced to present market prices. Expenses of administration, organization, etc., have been met, and the Company started the new year in a position that will leave earnings available for dividends.

General Manager, H. H. Hastings, in his address, was very optimistic, and stated that sales of the Company's products for the first twelve months were in excess of $425,000. Sales at the present time were running at the rate of $700,000 per year. The Company is now manufacturing 250 tires and 250 tubes per day, and this output is being increased as rapidly as possible. Orders are coming in so rapidly that the entire output is shipped as quickly as it can be manufactured.

During the year the Company adopted and has the sole right for the now famous Endos process, which places Tiger Tires in a class by themselves. The Company has now about 4,000 shareholder-customers, a big, growing and well-established demand for its goods.

During the past year seven branches and distributing depots were established in the following cities: Halifax, Montreal, Ottawa, Hamilton, London, Calgary and Vancouver, the head office and chief supply depot being in Toronto.

"I am going to be able to tell you to-day something that I promised we would do a year ago, and that is, pay dividends," stated Mr. Hastings. "Your first dividend is not a large one, being 2 per cent. quarterly, or at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum on your preferred stock." This first dividend will be declared about June 10th.

Some of the Directors present also had a few remarks to make, expressing themselves as confident of the outlook for the coming year.

The Board of Directors was re-elected unanimously, and the Board and Officers are now as follows: William Seward, President; R. J. Graham, Vice-President; T. B. Pringle, Mark Smith, J. F. Hawkins, H. C. Moore; R. H. Hastings, General Manager; Secretary, H. C. Moore; Treasurer, F. B. Milligan; Factory Manager, William Seward.

GEORGE HAS THE RIGHT IDEA

"Well, George, it looks as if we were going to get a real crop this year—wouldn't be surprised by the looks of things now if it was as good as 1915."

"Hope you're right Lloyd, but if we do I guess I'll have to buy two Ford Trucks instead of the one I figured on. That haul would play hob with the teams—they're too slow anyway—I'll get a better price by getting there first."

"George" has the right idea. There isn't a farmer in this section who wouldn't be money ahead if he did all his hauling with a Ford Truck.

Drop in and see us first time you are in town. We have some figures on hauling costs that will prove mighty interesting.

The Mystery of the Silver Dagger

By RANDALL PARRISH

Restizing Wine was back of me, I managed to whirl the big bulk of the battling Russian about so as to block any surprise attack from the rear. This movement gave me the support of the wall, and, using it as a defense, I resorted to the same tactics adopted by Waldron, assaulting him with feet as well as hands, breaking his strangle hold on my throat and forcing him backward, so that a swift kick sent the fellow stumbling over a pile of books, clawing at the empty air for support. He would have gone sprawling upon his back if Wine had not been directly in the way. As it was, he struck the other, the force of his big body hurling the smaller man heavily against the ledge of the outer window. As the fellow struck, the glass shivered and crashed into a thousand pieces, but before Waldron could regain firm footing, or realize what had happened, I was again upon him, breaking through his dazed guard and driving my fists straight into his face.

The revolver in Wine's hand was discharged, the bullet whistling past me, but even as the report cracked, the pressure of the Jew's body forced the smaller man relentlessly backward over the sill. He gave utterance to one wild yell of fright, releasing the gun and gripping desperately at Waldron's collar for support, then toppled over backward and went down.

We both heard the crash as the splinters of glass gave way, and the dull, dead thud of the body as it struck somewhere far below. The Russian seemed paralyzed with terror, unable to quite comprehend what had occurred behind him. But I had seen the tragedy, and my mind worked like a flash. He made one weak effort to spring aside, forgetful of his own danger, his guard dropped, and I let him have it straight in the jaw. The clenched fist crunched into his whiskers, and, with arms flung up, he went over as if shot, his head striking an edge of the overturned bookcase as he fell, and lay there motionless, a trickle of blood slowly oozing out upon the floor.

I stepped back and leaned out through the broken window; three stories below, on a graveled roof, lay something black, huddled up grotesquely, which I knew was a human body, crushed helpless, its bones broken. I drew back from the gruesome sight, so sickened I reeled dizzily, clutching at the sill for support. As I clung there, uncertain, dazed, my mind for the moment a blank, some one began rattling and pounding against the door leading into the corridor.

I crossed the room, my limbs trembling so I could scarcely walk, my breath coming in gasps. They were kicking against the wood and pounding with fists, seeking to break in the lock. The sight sobered me, brought back my self-control and I threw the door open and faced them almost coolly. There were four policemen, the first a gray-mustached sergeant, revolver in hand, and behind these a jam of excited individuals of both sexes, peering over shoulders to gain view within. The sergeant gripped me by the collar. "Now, you; what's up here? Have you killed somebody?"

"No," I answered, making no effort to break away, still breathing hard, but able to express myself clearly. "There is a man dead, but he fell from a window. I have nothing to conceal, sergeant. My name is Severn, and I am connected with the United States consular service. Give me a chance and I'll hand you my card."

He must have been impressed by the way I acted and spoke, for he released his grasp and accepted the card I fished out of a vest pocket, holding it up to the light in order to read the script.

"Philip Severn," he repeated slowly, his glance wandering again to my face. "You are a friend of Clement Breckenridge—is that right?"

"Why, yes," in surprise. "I have known him for some years."

"I thought so; I don't forget a face often, but never heard your name before. I was waiting at the bank to see Breckenridge a few days ago, when he came out with you from his private office. He seemed very friendly. Well, now, Mr. Severn, what's been takin' place in here? Some hot fight, hain't there?"

His tone was friendly enough, and it was quite evident that my acquaintance with the banker had already given me a new standing.

"This is the end of the Alva murder and robbery," I said directly; "one of the men is dead, the other lies in there senseless, while the money they were after is there also in a valise untouched."

"Good God! What money?"

"So you didn't know about that, even! Well, I'll tell you. Captain Alva was killed to gain possession of a large sum which had been collected for revolutionary purposes in Chile. These fellows inside found out about such a payment having been made and waylaid him. They had to kill him in order to get the money."

"Who did it?"

"I am not quite sure, sergeant, but I think Gaspar Wine committed the murder. He plunged from a window and is lying dead down below there. The other fellow is still alive and was going to share in the spoils. You know him, I guess, a Russian Jew by the name of Waldron."

"Ivan Waldron, the Red orator?"

"That's the man. I'll tell you the story briefly; all that needs to be told now. I had reason to suspect these two and hid in that closet, where I could overhear them discussing a division of the spoils. The two quarrelled, during which Wine was forced out through the window. Then I got the best of Waldron, just as you fellows tried to break in."

The sergeant looked about, plainly puzzled.

"I guess your word ought to be good, Mr. Severn," he admitted. "Seein' as who you are. You live in Washington?"

"Yes—officially; my home is in Ohio."

"Where yer stopping here?"

I told him, naming the hotel at which I was registered.

"All right, then. I'll look around a bit; Morris, run down and call the patrol; have 'em get that body down out of there first when they come; Kelly, you stay here, with Halsey at the door."

I followed him and the fourth officer into the inner office. It was a wreck, but the sergeant took the scene in at a glance and picked his way across to the shattered window. The policeman bent over the outstretched figure of Waldron.

"How is the cuss, Carr?"

"Alive, all right, but got a h—l of a crack on the coco."

"Give him a glass of water in the face. Is this the guy you was telling me about, Mr. Severn?"

"Yes; it's locked, but supposed to be full of yellowbacks."

He pulled it forth from beneath the grasp of Waldron's arm.

"All right; I'll see it safe out o' here. I guess you'll have to go along with us, Mr. Severn; the captain will likely want ter ask some questions."

CHAPTER XV.

The Private Secretary.

I told my story to the captain much more in detail, and Breckenridge being found, stood sponsor for my identity, so that I was not detained. The next morning I testified before the coroner's jury over the crushed body of Wine, and later appeared in the room of the grand jury which indicted Waldron. On both these occasions I told enough to make matters reasonably clear, but carefully avoided any direct mention of Miss Gessler. No doubt her name would be brought into the case later, but I was determined it should not be introduced through my indiscretion on my part. Krantz's name was used, but only indirectly, and the impression was left upon me that influence was being brought to bear to shield the banker from any direct connection with the crime.

I knew that when the time came for trial I could scarcely hope to escape thus easily. Under cross-examination by the defendant's attorney, the whole affair would be probed to the very bottom, and I should be compelled to disclose every bit of information I possessed. In the meantime I must discover the girl, and learn from her own lips, if possible, just how deeply she was involved. Then, and then only, could I decide upon my own future course. But how was I to locate her? I had nothing to guide me in the search. There were only two people to whom I could turn for even a suggestion—Krantz, the banker, and Sarah Waldron. I doubted if either would reveal the truth, but I could use the threat of exposure against Krantz, and might thus terrorize him into revealing the truth. I decided that if the girl did not call me by phone before noon the next day I would certainly exhaust every effort to find her. She would assuredly learn by that time what had occurred, but, whether she so desired or not, I was not willing to let her drop out of my life. I would learn, at least, whatever Adolph Krantz knew about her.

The hours dragged away bringing no message, the delay merely strengthening my resolution and increasing my interest. After a lonely lunch, in which her face seemed ever before me, I took a taxi and drove direct to the bank, I crossed the marble-floored lobby and approached a desk rather doubtfully. A middle-aged man glanced up from his work, and listened quietly to my question, examining my card attentively.

"Ah, yes, United States consular service—I see. I regret to say that Mr. Adolph Krantz is not in the bank today. In fact he is out of town, possibly for a week. Yes, he left rather suddenly for Washington. Perhaps you might talk with his secretary."

I hesitated, yet almost as quickly decided to see what might develop.

"I will if you please, for just a moment."

"Very good, sir. The third door down that corridor to the left. You will find it ajar, I think; walk right in."

I proceeded as he directed, the glass partitions of the bank on one side, the other divided into small private offices, the equipment plainly handsome. The third door stood partly open, giving me a glimpse within before I ventured to enter. The place bore much more the appearance of a private library than a downtown business office. A woman was bending over the further desk, busied at some work. With heart beating somewhat faster I ventured to open the door sufficiently wide to enter.

There was no one else present, but her head instantly lifted, and she rose to her feet, with a quick smile, and outstretched hand, coming directly toward me.

"Mr. Philip Severn, at last," she exclaimed pleasantly. "My faith is rewarded."

"Your faith," I echoed, rallying from my surprise at this greeting. "Then you were expecting me?"

"I have never felt a very serious doubt. Does that sound odd? Let me close the door, and then we will sit down and talk. I am never disturbed when the door is shut. Here is the best place. Yes, Mr. Severn, I was certain curiosity would cause you to seek me, even if there was no other motive. I did not phone, so you came here."

"I had but two choices—to seek information either through Adolph Krantz or Sarah Waldron. I chose to try Krantz first."

"And you really had no suspicion I was to be found here?"

The Clenched Fist Crunched Into His Whiskers.

50,000 More Starving Russian Children have been alloted to the Save the Children Fund workers in the famine area about Saratov, by the All-British Committee.

At present, the generosity of the Canadian people has enabled the Canadian Committee of the Save the Children Fund to provide sufficient food for 75,000 children in Russia, who would otherwise have died from starvation.

Now that the Russian Relief Fund (including the British Red Cross), the Friend's Relief Mission and the British and Canadian Save the Children Funds have been united under the direction of Sir Benjamin Robertson, more work is being undertaken and there is a corresponding increase in the demand for funds.

There is absolutely no hope that Russian children can be helped by Russia itself, until the harvest which comes at the end of August. So it is necessary that money and food continue to be sent through the Canadian and British Organizations right through the summer.

Will you give something?

25c. will feed a child for a week. $1. will ensure sufficient food for one child for a month. $500. will establish a kitchen in the famine district and feed 100 children until the next harvest.

Cheques and money orders may be forwarded through the local committee, your bank or sent direct to Sir George Burn, Treasurer, Save the Children Fund, Elgin Building, Ottawa.

All subscriptions are expended in Canada on Canadian Foodstuffs.

"None whatever. Why should I? Not even yet do I know whom I am speaking with."

"Oh, yes, you do—Marie Gessler, revolutionist, messenger to the Chilean Junta." She laughed, her eyes sparkling. "Does not that satisfy?"

"Pass from it; I believe I am entitled to even more."

"Indeed you are. I have the honor of being also private secretary to Mr. Adolph Krantz. Now, what next?"

"Well, when he writes you a check, what name does he make it payable to?"

"Let me see; did you ever know any one called Tom Longdale?"

"Did I? Why, great Scott! you cannot mean that you are actually Helen? It is not possible."

"Oh, yes, it is; little girls grow up, you know. And now if you will be quiet and quiet I am going to tell you just how it all happened. What led me to become a desperate conspirator, and—well, yes—a famous detective. Are you all ready for my confession?"

She seated her hand on mine, and permitted my fingers to close over it, in a spirit of frank good fellowship.

"Then listen; it may make you shudder in some of its blood-curdling details, and possibly you may consider my actions very unwomanly. Now just be quiet until I finish."

Her eyes met mine earnestly, but I felt I could perceive a certain pleading in her depths.

"I am Tom Longdale's sister Helen. As you doubtless know, financially there is no necessity for my seeking employment. Indeed I did not seek it, but was induced to accept this position at the request of Mr. Krantz, who has been a lifelong friend of my father's. I enjoy the work, however, and have been here now nearly three years. Adolph Krantz is a most loyable man, and I am devoted to his service. My knowledge of German is rare, and has found it more or less difficult to get away from that influence. Much money from Europe passes through his hands in financing various schemes, and among others this revolutionary fund was intrusted to him. At first he accepted this in the ordinary course of business, without suspicioning its purpose, but later learned how the money was being expended. The moment he became doubtful, Mr. Krantz absolutely severed all connections with these plotters and their schemes. While this was thoroughly understood officially, in Washington, where he resorted in his suspicion, certain circles, engaged in underhand work, still believed he could be used for their purposes."

"Yet he accepted the trust?"

"In a way, yes; but with perfectly loyal intent. As soon as word secretly reached him that he was to be thus used, he laid the full facts before the officials of this bank. I was present as his secretary, and learned then for the first time what I had already told you. They advised that he make the plot known immediately to the authorities at Washington. He was directed to accept the order, and thus, through seeming co-operation, learn the details connected with it. There was delay for some reason Alva was not quite ready to go ahead, and refused to draw the money. Proof of conspiracy was lacking until this was consummated. Mr. Krantz, being afraid that he would be followed if he went again to Washington, delegated me to go, as I was entirely unknown. The Secret Service there outlined a plan designed to hurry matters. I was to be sent direct to these men—Alva, in particular—with positive instructions from the higher powers in Washington to draw the money and get busy. As I speak Spanish easily, and took the name of a well-known female revolutionist now in this country, but unknown even to Alva, the task did not seem a specially dangerous one."

She paused for a moment, her mind gathering up the odds and ends of narrative.

"It is not necessary that I go further into detail. I met Captain Alva as planned, and was taken to the place where his gang gathered. Krantz was there with the money, and my message compelled the Chilean to accept, and receipt for it. Government agents were stationed in Jersey City to intercept him on his way back to New York. He never got far enough to fall into their hands; before he had driven four blocks he was murdered and robbed. The rest of the story you already know."

"The money was actually in that valise, then?"

"Some money was, but not all. We were afraid it might be opened before an arrest could be made. Each package had real money on the outside; altogether the amount did not exceed fifteen hundred dollars, and these bills were all marked."

"But you suspected Wine? I know of your call at his office."

"I wondered if you did. Were you there then?"

"Yes, I followed you in."

"I wish I had known; I would have ventured more than I dared to alone. I suspected—yes; but that was all. I possessed no facts, but I frightened him so when I exhibited that hat-pin I felt absolutely convinced that he was guilty."

"You had no reason to believe he possessed such a weapon?"

"None whatever; I merely took a chance. I think now the pin used belonged to Sarah Waldron, but how it came there can only be determined through a confession by her husband."

She Did Not Move, or Glance Up.

Her eyes lifted again to mine, questioningly, and a bit anxious.

"Was my course right or wrong, Philip Severn?"

"Undoubtedly right, although I imagine few girls would have had the courage."

"You believe in me still? in the woman?"

My handclasp tightened, and her eyed dropped before the message she must have instantly read in mine.

"This has been a test of us both which we will never regret," I answered soberly, "for it has brought faith, hope, love; is this not true?"

She did not move, or glance up, but I caught the whispered response of her lips.

(THE END.)

EARLY SCANDAL RECALLED.

Something About the Brawling Brood of Bribers.

A celebrated episode in Ontario politics has come into notice again through the death of Sir Donald Macmaster. This was the famous bribery conspiracy case of 1884, in the investigation of which Sir Donald, then a young lawyer, took part as one of the counsel for the defendants.

"When I took the chair in the Legislative Assembly on the evening of the 17th of March, 1884, I carried with me that which was destined to create a wide sensation when laid before the House," said Col. Charles Clarke in his book, "Sixty Years in Upper Canada," recalling many years after the incident described. "Robert McKim, member for North Wellington, and William D. Balfour, member for South Essex, had each given to me in the afternoon of that day a letter addressed to me as Speaker. Opening the outer envelope, I found that there was a second and sealed envelope in each package, and that both were endorsed with the request that the second cover should not be broken until the Attorney-General should desire me to ascertain the contents."

That evening the envelopes were opened at the request of Premier Oliver Mowat, and found to contain $1,000 and $800, paid, respectively, to the two members for the purpose of influencing their vote, and the payment being made by "Big Push" Wilkinson. This was the beginning of a long and sensational episode, and the phrase uttered by Hon. C. F. Fraser, when he spoke of all implicated in the affair as "a brawling brood of bribers," became celebrated. A lengthy inquiry was held by Mr. Justice Proudfoot, Judge Scott of Peel, and Judge Senkler of Lincoln. But the net result of the whole thing was slight, and police court proceedings resulted in an acquittal.

The passage at arms between Oliver Mowat and Donald Macmaster in the examination of the former by the latter was a fine exhibition of legal surgery, and when the brilliant and sarcastic S. H. Blake encountered Sir David Macpherson, massive and stately, the characteristics of the two men were pointedly brought out. Sarcasm and repartee likewise abounded when Dalton McCarthy examined Hon. C. F. Fraser and Hon. A. S. Hardy.

Of those who were prominently connected with the case, probably the only survivors now are Henry C. Hamilton, who was Secretary of the commission, now living quietly in Toronto after years of residence at Sault Ste. Marie, and Edward Meek, a barrister in Toronto for many years past.

A Mark Twain Poem.

An unpublished Mark Twain poem has been sent in to the great humorist's publishers, the Harpers, by Mrs. E. B. C. Hanington, of Kimberley, B. C. In an accompanying letter Mrs. Hanington explained that the poem was written for her son, who was at that time just a youngster. She inclosed the manuscript, which is in Mark Twain's own handwriting and hilarious with his characteristic humor, authorizing the publishers to print the poem if they saw fit. The Harpers, realizing the great value of the little poem, have sent it on to the Mark Twain estate, where it will be held until the return from Europe of Mark Twain's official biographer, Albert Bigelow Paine.

CASTORIA

Fletcher's Castoria is strictly a remedy for Infants and Children. Foods are especially prepared for babies. A baby's medicine from mom must be essential for baby. Remedies primarily prepared for grown-ups are not interchangeable. It was the need of a remedy for the common ailments of Infants and Children that brought Castoria before the public after years of research, and no claim has been made for it that its use for over 30 years has not proven.

What is CASTORIA?

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. For more than thirty years it has been in constant use for the relief of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic and Diarrhoea; allaying Feverishness arising therefrom, and by regulating the Stomach and Bowels, aids the assimilation of Food; giving healthy and natural sleep. AUSTRIANS ARE BUSY.

There Is No Unemployment In That Country.

Austrian industrial circles are anxious about one great problem. Will it be possible to maintain the present favorable situation in trade and industry, or will Austria be forced to share in the international crisis of bad trade and unemployment which has affected the neighboring countries?

In the midst of general hardship, a depreciated currency, and ruinous increase in the cost of living, Austria has found one ray of hope in the fact that, like Germany, she has really no unemployed. Every man has been able to earn his daily bread, and every one willing to work has full opportunity to do so.

At the end of 1921 there were only 18,000 unemployed in all Austria. But much anxiety is now felt as to how long this state of affairs will continue. Greater burdens, especially in taxation, are constantly being imposed on industry, wages and other outgoings have reached fantastic figures, and it is a grave question whether the industrial and commercial undertakings will be able to keep up with these continually increasing expenditures.

A weekly wage of 20,000 kronen is now the rule for ordinary unskilled labor, while skilled artisans easily obtain double that sum. Some of the largest industrial concerns have a weekly pay roll amounting to 400,000,000 crowns. New demands for higher wages are now being put forward and other quite unforeseen expenses have to be met, which involve altogether the payment of many millions. Such enormous increases in the expenses of production have already compelled some firms to restrict the number of employes to the lowest possible figure, selecting these from the strongest and most capable workers.

However, the leading industries are provided with orders for months ahead, and there is yet no perceptible cessation in trade. Some industries which work exclusively for the home markets find a little falling off in orders, owing to the lower purchasing power of the crown, and the disinclination to invest in new undertakings.

A glance over the situation in various industrial groups will confirm these views. In the mining industry the demand is very great and workmen are wanted wherever it is possible to provide them with housing accommodation. Iron and steel works, tool factories, high-grade steel and cutlery works and foundries, all have abundant orders in hand. Agricultural machine factories have plenty of work except in the reaper branches which are suffering from the bad harvest in Russia and other eastern countries. The electro-technical factories have orders enough on hand to keep them busy for months.

The export trade is particularly good in special kinds of machinery, ploughs, threshing machines, wagons and machine tools. Locomotive works are also fully employed. The few shipyards which are left to Austria have plenty of work. Factories working for the home markets have fewer orders chiefly because the steam engine is being displaced by electric power.

There is another side to this favorable situation. For many months past the automobile industry has been in a bad way. Very few cars are sold at home. Some time ago the factories exported nine-tenths of their output, having the advantage of a very cheap exchange. This has now been more than offset by high import duties, by luxury taxes, by the reluctance of buyers and also by the competition of foreign factories more economically managed. Hence the Austrian manufacturers have been forced to discharge hundreds of men and the crisis may become more acute.

For the furniture manufacturers, it would seem as if the good times were past. Factories making brass and iron furniture are also doing little business at home. Activity in the building trades was confined last year mainly to factory-building, but this has now stopped.

The Austrian textile industry reduced its output considerably last fall; the cotton industry is working at about only 60 per cent. of its capacity. In the small industries and in handwork, many persons are unemployed. The buying power of the public is decreasing. Large classes of people are utterly unable to buy new clothes, all their available income being spent on food. At the moment when trade was bad the workmen demanded higher wages and the evil effects of such thoughtless and inconsiderate action are now beginning to be felt.

A Costly Home.

Housing Canada's Government comes high. In the fiscal year ended March 31, 1921, nearly $5,000,000 was spent on the new Parliament Buildings, which, in the matter of minor details and the scheme of ornamentation, are not likely to be completed for some years. Four other big items are: Grounds, including Major's Hill Park, $586,440.21; sundry other buildings, $347.97; departments generally, care and cleaning of departmental buildings, including $100 to E. Snowdon for fixing a noon gun, $29,992.25; central heating plant, connections and operation, $291,638.22.

Among the smaller items of expenditure under appropriations for public works during the same fiscal year, as shown in the report of the Public Works Department, as tabled in the House of Commons recently, are the following: Departmental buildings—East Block, $25,607.28; West Block, $18,260.44; Langevin Block, $12,742.84; Connaught Building, $32,005.78; Hunter Building, $69,450.05; city post office, $22,628.02; repairs and furniture, $75,082.61; telephone service, $88,500; maintenance of acquired property on Wellington street west, $64,886.33; astronomical observatory and geodetic building, $12,946.60; experimental farm, $103,106.02; fuel testing plant, $11,126.67; partial reconstruction of ore-dressing plant, $5,999.70; Mines Building, Sussex street, $10,559.96; National Art Gallery, $19,982.25; Printing Bureau, elevators, additions, etc., $159,700.14; Public Works, workshop, $11,448.90; Rideau Hall, $23,581.71; Rideau Hall, grounds and greenhouses, $13,742.55; snow, $4,957.12; fuel and light, $17,000; watchman, $895; Royal Canadian Mounted Police, building, $79,164.86, temporary quarters, $11,599.52; Royal Mint, $33,510.47; Victoria Memorial Museum, $76,274.79.

Canadian Mountain Playgrounds

Possibly no other part of the world gives up to its people a greater expanse of country for recreation purposes than Canada. From the Atlantic to the Pacific large tracts of territory have been set aside by the Dominion or Provincial Governments—great unspoiled kingdoms, where nature and beauty vie with each other, where bird and animal life is unmolested, and where everything is as nature planned it. Just what this means to mortal man it is difficult to estimate, but it makes life worth while for those who embrace the opportunity of spending their vacation in these great open spaces These playgrounds are, in addition, a great national asset, as thousands of tourists annually from all parts of the world worship with us at our scenic shrines.

Of the great Canadian National Parks, Jasper Park, which has an area of 4,400 square miles, is without a peer In fact, it is doubtful if anywhere in an equal area such mountain scenery and wonder features can be found—majestic peaks, snowfields and glaciers, deep canyons and mighty rivers on every hand.

Jasper Park Lodge is at present being constructed and will be ready for the reception of this year's tourists. It will be operated by the Canadian National Railways.

THE CAUSE OF WARBLES

The Gad Fly Annoys Cattle and Injures Hides.

How the Pest Operates—Effects and Losses Described—Prevention and Treatment of Warbles — Weeds Versus Wheat.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

The name "warbles" is applied to a rather common condition affecting cattle which is characterized by the appearance of small lumps along the back and loins. The lumps gradually develop during the late winter months, and as spring approaches the skin along the back and loins is noticed to be covered with small rounded swellings about the size of a small walnut. The lumps are quite tender at first, and when they become fully developed a round hole, surrounded by a little frothy matter, becomes noticeable in the centre of each little swelling. Through each of these little openings in the skin a grub or warble finally emerges. The explanation of the occurrence and development of warbles in cattle is rather interesting.

The Gad Fly Is Responsible For the Injury.

The primary cause is the "Gad Fly," of which there are two varieties technically termed the Hyderma bovis and the Hyderma lineata. These flies attack cattle while at pasture during the warm summer season, and are seldom troublesome during cold damp weather. They make a buzzing sound when in flight, and cattle when attacked by them become terrified to such an extent as to cause them to stampede, which is commonly known as "gadding." The flies attack the lower parts of the body and the legs. They deposit their eggs in the hairs close to the skin, and in such a manner that the eggs are firmly attached to the hairs. After a time the eggs are hatched, and the larva or young insect passes down the hair follicle, through the skin, into the tissues. Further development of the larva takes place in the tissues, and finally they are end in making their way to the region of the back, which they appear to select for the last stage of their development, and form little lumps in the skin, in each of which a grub or "warble" is present, which is the mature larva. Finally the grub bores its way out through the skin and falls to the ground, where it passes through the chrysalis or caterpillar stage encased in a cocoon or shell-like covering, and is transformed into a pup- which in about a month becomes fully developed and emerges as the mature adult gad fly.

Effects and Loss Sustained.

The effects produced by gad flies and warbles are chiefly economic losses, which the flies cause by worrying cattle while at pasture during the summer time and lessening milk production, and the damage which the warbles inflict to the skin, thus lessening the value of hides for tanning purposes. The extent of the injury done to hides through warbles is considerable, and it is conservatively estimated that twenty-five per cent. of cattle hides are thus damaged each year. Tanners and hide dealers do not want warbled hides, as the uses a grubby hide can be put to are limited, and as a result they are graded low and reduced in price.

Prevention and Treatment.

Various preparations have been recommended and used as repellants to ward off the attacks of gad flies and prevent them laying eggs on cattle during the summer season. Local treatment of the backs of cattle with a mixture of sulphur, oil of tar and train oil is popular, but it would appear to be of little real service. It is now generally considered that in districts where warbles are troublesome that the best course to be adopted is to keep the cattle under shelter or the shade of trees during the heat of the day in summer to prevent them being attacked by the flies as far as possible. During the winter months the cattle should be examined every week, and if any of them are noticed to be affected with warbles the grubs should be squeezed out of their backs every few weeks or at least once a month. To facilitate the removal and destruction of the grubs the little openings in the skin over each lump may be enlarged a little with the point of a sharp knife and a little iodoform-vaseline ointment applied. This ointment is composed of one part of iodoform and five parts of vaseline, and is very effective in killing the grubs. The grubs can be readily squeezed out of the lumps at the proper time and should be destroyed to prevent their further development and thus lessen the number of flies for the coming summer. If these precautions and simple measures were carried out by cattle owners each winter the occurrence of warbles would be largely overcome, and a needless loss avoided which in the aggregate is very considerable as it involves loss of condition, lessened milk production and damage to the hides.—C. D. McGilvray, Principal Ontario Veterinary College, Toronto.

Weeds Versus Wheat.

Ragweed removes from the soil 14.6 pounds of nitrogen and three pounds of phosphoric acid for each ton of weeds, while the same weight of wheat in grain and straw removes only 12.2 pounds of nitrogen and 2.8 pounds of phosphoric acid. One ton of such wheat is equivalent to a 13-bushel crop.

Warm water, green feed and hot mashes boost the egg production.

Ultra-Polite.

GETTING RID OF WEEDS

Co-operative Methods Have Been Tested for Ten Years.

More Farmers Should Get Into the Game—How to Control Perennial Sow Thistle and Twitch Grass—Other Weed Destruction Methods Given Next Week.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

During the past ten years (1911-1921) the Ontario Agricultural and Experimental Union has conducted co-operative experiments in weed eradication. Over ninety farmers have carried out successful experiments. The weeds experimented with were:—Perennial Sow Thistle, Twitch Grass, Bladder Campion or Cow Bell, Wild Mustard, Ox-eye Daisy, Field Bindweed, Wild Oats and Chess. Those who took part in these experiments profited by the experience. In nearly every instance they cleaned the field experimented with, and demonstrated to their own satisfaction the effectiveness of the method tried, and at the same time their results furnished practical information to others.

Experiments For the Current Year.

1. The use of rape in the destruction of Perennial Sow Thistle.
2. A system of intensive cropping and cultivation for the eradication of Perennial Sow Thistle.
3. The use of rape in the destruction of Twitch Grass.
4. A method of cultivation for the destruction of Twitch Grass.
5. A method of cultivation for the eradication of Bladder Campion or Cow Bell.
6. Spraying with iron sulphate to destroy mustard in cereal crops.
7. A method of cultivation for the destruction of Ox-eye Daisy.
8. A method of cultivation and cropping for the suppression of Field Bindweed or Wild Morning Glory (requires two years to complete).
9. A method of cultivation and cropping for the eradication of Wild Oats (requires two years to complete.)
10. A method of cultivation for the destruction of Chess.

All who have any of the above weeds on their farms are invited to co-operate in this work. Information regarding the carrying out of these experiments may be secured by writing to Prof. J. E. Howitt, Director, Co-operative Experiments in Weed Eradication, Botanical Department, O. A. C., Guelph.

The results of the ten years' experiments would warrant the recommendation of the following method for the eradication of Twitch Grass and the Perennial Sow Thistle. How to prevent Mustard from seeding in cereal crops, and how to eradicate Bladder Campion or Cow Bell, will be dealt with next week.

The Rape Method for the Control of Perennial Sow Thistle and Twitch Grass.

Cultivate the field until about the middle of June, running over it frequently with the cultivator so as to keep the tops down and thus weaken the "roots." A cultivator with broad points should be used, which will cut off the Sow Thistle or Twitch Grass below the surface of the ground and not break up the root stocks too much. About the middle of June apply manure at the rate of about twenty tons per acre (twelve good loads). Cultivate the manure in thoroughly and with a double mould board plough slightly ridge up the land, making the ridges about twenty-six inches apart. On the ridges sow pasture rape (Dwarf Essex variety) at the rate of about one and a half pounds per acre. It is important that the right amount of rape be sown, for if too little is sown the stand will not be thick enough to smother the weeds and if, on the other hand, too much is sown the rape plants will be too crowded and not grow vigorously enough to keep ahead of the Twitch Grass or Sow Thistle. Sow the rape when the land is sufficiently moist to secure quick germination of the seed. If the rape is slow in starting the Twitch Grass or Sow Thistle may get a start in the rows and thus necessitate hand cultivation. Cultivate the rape every week or ten days until it occupies all the ground and makes further cultivation impossible. If, when the rape is cut or pastured any of the weeds remain the field should be ridged up last thing in the fall and put in with another hoed crop the following year. This has not been found necessary when a good stand of rape has been secured.

In our co-operative weed experiments it has been found that rape is a much more satisfactory crop to use in the eradication of Twitch Grass than buckwheat and that rape gives much better results in the eradication of Twitch Grass and Perennial Sow Thistle when sown in drills and cultivated than it does when sown broadcast.—J. E. Howitt, O. A. College, Guelph.

Indirect Income Should Appear In Farm Accounts.

Labor income is not the limiting factor in determining how much the farmer shall have to eat, but it is the determining factor for the wage scale in the city. Food, fuel, and shelter are primary requisites of life, and the farm furnishes its proprietor a good proportion of these necessaries in addition to the income he derives from the sale of farm products. These things that the farm furnishes directly toward the living expenses of the farmer's family enable him to live even though his crops are poor. This indirect income from the farm is often underestimated, often overlooked, unless provision is made for accurately recording it in the farm accounting system.—U. S. Weekly News Letter.

Rotten Row.

Rotten Row, the famous fashion parade in Hyde Park, London, is said to derive its name from route de roi —the King's Road. A mile and a half long, the Row is laid with tan bark and by order that the horses and their riders may have a safe and pleasant passage.

Taller Girls.

Statistics of women's colleges covering a period of 60 years show the average college girl of to-day is an inch taller than the college girl of 1860. The figures also prove that she is six or seven pounds heavier and at others as short as the shortest of them have ever been. The rounding line taken by the panels at their lower ends adds a portion of charm to the skirt which could not possibly be gained by a straightly cut off line posed at that point.

The waistline for this frock is placed at a normal point, and it repeats the succession of rows of braiding used to trim the jacket so effectively. Then, this trimming motif is carried again into the sleeves, where it not only runs around the oddly shaped cuffs, but faces detached strips of the material that hang away from the sleeves, from the elbows to the cuffs.

Sleeves—always sleeves—sleeves in varying widths and varying styles, are the salient features of the frocks which are notable for spring.

Trimmed With Ribbon Rosettes.

A winsome dress is trimmed with a series of ribbon rosettes applied to a heavy crepe. The crepe is one of the brownish, goldfish tones, that can stand by itself for coloring, except for the fact that the rosettes are made of a succession of pleated and fringed ribbons in dull reds, and greens and browns.

The hat, too, has been cleverly made of a series of the same rosettes set around the brim of a closely fitting turban. And then rows of ribbon, set on straight, around the waistline and sleeves, end at one side of the waist in a fringed series of tags dangling over the skirt where it is draped at that point.

This dress shows one of the longer waistline which, from all that can be learned about the coming fashions, is something likely to remain with us for at least another season. This is cheerful news for the long, slim figures, which can so well stand the line; but for the shorter women there is every chance they will find the normal waistline and, in some instances, a line that is higher still, the fashion for them.

More and more is the fact disclosed that one places one's waistline, and the rest of the lines of one's costume, for the matter of that, exactly where one wishes, for the fashion of individuality grows upon the population as time goes on. More and more women are willing to take the courageous step which stamps them as persons with their very own style of dressing.

The newer woolen fabrics for spring are something to be wondered at and loved, for they are woven in so soft and pliable a manner that, from a distance, one cannot tell them from silken materials. The Roller kasha cloth has made a distinct sensation, for it is being used right and left for the making of street dresses, two-piece costumes and suits of various sorts. Its chief attribute is that, while it is as soft as any woolen material coming from the looms in many a long year, it is shown in many and vivid colorings, so that any taste and any style of garment can be successfully carried out with this material as a foundation.

Kasha Cloth is Popular.

For all the dresses which used to feature serge, kasha cloth is now used, for it is only a refined and beautified serge, with all the surface of a wool velours and all of the foundation weave of a serge, to give it firmness and solidity of texture.

Then silks have taken a very strong place in the designing and making of clothes for the street which are always the first dresses to be considered for spring. Silks have such strength of texture that they serve excellently for all sorts of frocks for which woolen materials have usually been employed.

It takes a long while to turn the mind in the direction of accepting silk as a material for street dresses—especially if one expects them to amount to anything after they have been given any amount of wear. However, such is the perfection of heavy silk as it is woven today that it can fairly stand alongside the heavier materials and compete with them, on an equal basis, ican women are doing nothing of the sort. Perhaps they will come around with a wild rush to dress as they are bidden, but as yet they have shown no disposition in that direction. Their only feeling for longer skirts is when they wear losely hanging panels which bob about so saucily in the breeze that one can scarcely distinguish whether they are long or not.

Rosettes of Fluted and Fringed Ribbon Trimming a Gown of Silk Crepe.

Still, the fact remains that the newer spring models making their appearance have somewhat longer skirts, though not nearly so long as might have been suspected.

We have the loose, short coat for spring. This is something entirely new, for it has sleeves that often are made kimono-fashion. The French have adopted this style, and we are following, even though we are prone to consider the suit as something which must have tightly-fitted sleeves with armholes that are as defined and stitched and shaped as any tailored man's garment—and sometimes more so. The little, loose coat will be one of the spring features, and while sometimes it will have a skirt to match, more often it will be combined with a skirt of some other material and some contrasting color. The coat will be patterned or striped and the skirt will be plain, or the combination will be reversed and the skirt will carry the pattern, while the coat will be plain.

With or Without Wraps.

Street dresses for spring—those that can be worn with or without wraps to cover them—are perhaps the most interesting of all the new dresses. They really form the foundation-note for many costume suits, as they are called, for if it is a simple matter to select a wrap or a top coat that carries out the scheme of the dress, once the costume has been given some distinction of design. Long models show things which he considers to be the most interesting designs for wear during the coming season. They have all of the features which make the new frocks popular, and they are made from the materials which will be most used for spring.

A dress with a simulated jacket is made of dark blue wool velours, in an extremely light weight. Its edges are braided closely, so that the little addition to the bodice suggests a jacket. The sleeves are made puffed and full, and are gathered into tightly fitted and flaring cuffs, which represent features of the newer type of spring dresses.

This dress shows one of those clever usages of panels, making the skirt look surprisingly long at some angles for all the honors of giving steady wear, of providing an economical medium of dressing, and so on, through all the necessary attributes of any material which attempts to take an honored place among those sponsored by American women for any sort of seasonable wear.

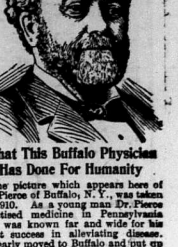
Of course, for afternoon or evening wear silks have always been accepted, but this new venture is something that will be welcomed once women come to realize the many advantages that can be gained by wearing a material that is so light and comfortable and easy to wear.

Favored for Various Garments.

Capes of silk, and wrapping coats of silk, and short coats of silk, all come within the new range of this material. Some of the most picturesque of the modern garments have been made from the new, and sumptuous weaves of crepe silks that are now on the market. One expects to find them clinging and drooping of line, and is surprised to see them with quite an up-standing manner of their own, not usually attributed to anything with a silken weave for its texture. The enhanced beauty of these silk outer things is that they can be lined with other and different colored silks, taking on an added charm thereby. Somehow one silk backed against another silk is more charming



What This Buffalo Physician Has Done For Humanity

The picture which appears here of Dr. Pierce of Buffalo, N. Y., was taken in 1910. As a young man Dr. Pierce practised medicine in Pennsylvania and was known far and wide for his great success in alleviating disease. He early moved to Buffalo and put up in ready-to-use form, his Golden Medical Discovery, the well-known tonic for the blood. This strength-builder is made from a formula which Dr. Pierce found most effective in diseases of the blood. It contains no alcohol and is an extract of native roots with the ingredients plainly stated on the wrapper. Good red blood, vim, vigor and vitality are sure to follow if you take this Alterative Extract. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery clears away pimples and annoying eruptions and tends to keep the complexion fresh and clear. This Discovery corrects the disordered conditions in a sick stomach, aids digestion, acts as a tonic and purifies the blood. Write Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y., and receive confidential medical advice without charge. All druggists sell Discovery, tablets or liquid.

EXPENSIVE BOOKS.

First Editions Costly But No One Reads Them.

"It may as well be admitted that we do not buy expensive books to read," writes Mr. A. Edward Newton, in "Amenities of Book Collecting."

"We may say that it is a delight to us to look at the very page on which appeared for the first time such a poem as 'On first looking into Champan's Homer,' or to read that bit of realism unsurpassed, where Robinson Crusoe one day, about noon, discovered the print of a man's naked foot on the sand; but when we sit down with a copy of Keats, we do not ask for a first edition; much less when we want to live over again the joys of our childhood, do we pick up a copy of Defoe which would be a find at a thousand dollars. But first editions of Keats' poems, 1817, in boards, with the paper label if possible, and a Defoe unwashed in a sound old calf binding, are good things to have. They are indeed a joy forever, and will never pass into nothingness. I cannot see why the possession of fine books is more reprehensible than the possession of valuable property of any sort.

"In speaking of books as an investment, one implies first editions. First editions are scarce; tenth editions, as Charles Lamb stutteringly suggested, are scarcer, but there is no demand for them. Why, then, first editions? The question is usually dodged; the truth may as well be stated. There is joy in mere ownership. It is a joy, akin to that of possessing, and, which seems to need no defence. We do not walk over our property every day; we commonly do not see it; but when the fancy takes us, we love to forget our cares and responsibilities in a ramble over our fields. In a like manner, and for the same reason, we browse with delight in a corner of our library in which we have placed our most precious books.

"We should buy our books as we buy our clothes, not only to cover our nakedness, but to delight the soul, and we should buy more books and fewer clothes."

Marriage and Women's Work.

In her volume on "Women Professional Workers," Dr. Elizabeth Adams says, writing of the United States—

"It is no longer taken as a matter of course that women will entirely give up their professional work when they marry, and hence cannot expect to receive serious attention and consideration. A growing number of professional married couples, most of them young, are working out the problem together and making for themselves a place in social adjustment. There is a deepening conviction that in order to bring an ethical tone to intelligent citizenship the home and parent alike must be intelligent citizens and workers themselves.

"A woman cannot adequately meet the obligations to her own children without at the same time meeting the obligations to other children and other people's homes. Motherhood is the school, the playground, the home, the store, the office, and the factory. The working out of simple standards of living and household routine, the better understanding of the principles and practices governing physical and moral health in children, the ability to train them as well as desirable to meet both sets of obligations, and to have one reinforce instead of hindering the other."

Wrangel Island, one of the most important islands in the Arctic region, has been claimed for Great Britain by a party of 25 men, including Canadian and four Eskimos, Vilhjalmar Stefansson, Arctic explorer, organizer of the expedition. Mr Stefansson said the British flag had been unfurled on the island, September 21st last.

Stefansson, a British subject, said his fifth and latest Arctic expedition, made up of Allen Crawford, a son of a Toronto University professor; E. L. Knight, McMinnville, Ore.; Frederick Mauer, of New Philadelphia, Ohio, and Milton Galle, of New Braunfels, Texas, with four Eskimos, was sent by him into the northern wastes for the express purpose of claiming Wrangel Island for the British.

Wrangel Island is about the size of Jamaica, lying 100 miles off the coast of Siberia and 400 miles west of Behring Straits. Strategically the island dominates Northwestern Siberia.

WELCOME, WINTRY WINDS?

What did you do with your summer's dough?
It's gone; and you hate to tell.
Soon we'll have both hail and snow,
It sure would make one yell.
But! we should worry! let it come,
The wintry winds we'll greet,
For we were shod at the Hospital
And we shall have dry feet.
Hog! Dog! nor devil, do we fear,
For our understanding's good;
Our soxs are dry, our feet are glad,
We did as wise fool's should.

LIEURANCE'S CREMONA ORCHESTRA

ANOTHER HIGH CLASS MUSICAL FOR CHAUTAUQUA

All who attended Chautauqua three summers ago will remember Lieurance's Little Symphony that was such a delight to Chautauqua everywhere they appeared. Here is another such company, sponsored by the same organizer of musical companies, Mr. Thurlow Lieurance, the well-known American composer. Seven excellent instrumentalists compose the company and a high class and popular programme will be given both afternoon and evening. The orchestra is directed by Mr. Morton Howard, pianist; its other members are Miss Maybeth Mack, first violin; Miss Helen Newmeyer, assistant first violin; Miss Elizabeth Howman, viola-violin; Miss Mary Howard, violin; Mr. Carol Parkinson, first 'cellist; Miss Gwaita Gable, second 'cellist. Their programme has been arranged with the care that has characterized all companies presented by Mr. Lieurance. One of the features of its programme will be the playing of a special arrangement of several of Mr. Lieurance's best compositions.

THREATENED MRS. SMALL.

Blackmail Attempted in Connection With Mysterious Disappearance.

TORONTO, June 5.—For attempting to extort $15,000 from Mrs. Ambrose J. Small, under threat of exposing her to the police as a person intimately concerned with the disappearance of her husband, Northcote L. Dainton, aged 30, was taken into custody about eight o'clock Sunday morning. The arrest was made outside the suburban street car waiting-room at Davenport road and Bathurst street, a few minutes after Dainton had picked up a deep package placed there by Mrs. Small. Dainton is charged with extortion.

Dainton, the police say, sent a letter to Mrs. Small last Friday and warned her that refusal to place the money demanded in a certain corner of the seat in the waiting-room mentioned above by eight o'clock Sunday morning, would lead to her being denounced as an active participant in the Small case. Mrs. Small carried the letter to detective headquarters. Arrangements were made there to catch the writer of the blackmailing note, and Monday morning, in company with her chauffeur, Mrs. Small called at the waiting-room and deposited the dummy package in the spot referred to. She then left the waiting-room, and drove back home.

Meanwhile, the police had watched operations from a point of vantage nearby. They saw Dainton, who had been lounging near the waiting-room, enter the waiting-room, pick up the package, and emerge from its recess. As he stepped outside, he was pounced upon by the detectives, who conveyed him to headquarters.

Examined, he said that he had only been in the city two weeks, and had jumped freights from Vancouver to Toronto.

This is the fourth blackmailing letter Mrs. Small has received during the last week or two.

M'KINNON IS ALIVE.

Principal In Acton Mystery Turns Up In the West.

ACTON, Ont., June 5.—The people of Acton and vicinity, who for the past two months have been greatly agitated by the strange disappearance of John McKinnon, a young farmer, from his homestead, were relieved when news reached the town Sunday that he was alive and well. The information was contained in a letter sent to his friend, Harry Gordon, and was from a town in Western Canada. Evidently the young man became alarmed at the publicity given his disappearance, and anxious, let the public know he had not been a victim of foul play or of engulfment in the swamps adjacent to his farm, as was feared.

The information contained in the letter did not disclose the reasons for his sudden departure from the farm he had so recently purchased, and which he was getting into shape, in addition to furnishing the home in preparation of his marriage, that was to have taken place about three weeks from the date in April last when he disappeared.

Mr. Gordon showed the letter from McKinnon to Chief Constable J. J. Cooney, D.C.M., and that officer reported the matter to the provincial police authorities. It was not considered advisable to make known the whereabouts of McKinnon at the present time.
